

POLITICO

VIRTUAL EVENTS

TWITTER CHAT | VIRTUAL PANEL | NEWSMAKER DISCUSSION

As unprecedented global events call for brand new ways of living and working, POLITICO is continuing to provide real-time news providing influencers with critical information and ongoing developments.

From livestream interviews, video panels, to twitter chats, POLITICO's virtual events offer the same high-quality journalism, the same convening power, as well as access to a genuinely global audience freed from the constraint of having to attend in person.

TWITTER CHATS

A POLITICO reporter moderates and facilitates an online, live chat on Twitter on a timely policy issue with contributors online including decision-makers from the public and private sectors.

As a highly engaging online conversation, the audience has no geographical boundary and can send tweets and interact with both our reporter and contributors during the scheduled timing of the conversation.

In order to create a real and more interactive discussion, the moderator and all contributor are connected via a conference call line

VIRTUAL PANELS & NEWSMAKER INTERVIEWS

As per our live conversations, our virtual newsmaker interviews and panel discussions are moderated by a POLITICO Reporter and aim at convening key decision-makers from the public and private sectors to discuss and debate the key factors shaping a timely politics or policy issue.

The event takes place online and the moderators, the speakers and the audience interact through a virtual platform. The whole conversation is livestreamed on POLITICO.eu, Facebook and twitter.

Whether you're looking to underwrite an important conversation on politics or policy, via social media, podcast or video, our events team can support you to make it a reality.